CIA PROJECT

The main objective of our Project is to improve the skills and employability of young people with special attention to those with fewer opportunities, through the creation of Local Intergenerational Civic Councils. The CIA Project makes the relationship between young and old extremely positive, enabling, on the one hand, the development of personal and professional skills based on the exchange of knowledge and experiences between young and old through local intergenerational civic councils, improving the employability of young people and allowing them access to civic decision-making, with particular reference to the group of young people who, due to their poor training, experience or level of skills development, they have greater difficulties in entering the labour market.

During the period between 15 and 16 September 2021, the Final Meeting of the CIA Project was held in Ermesinde, Portugal, at the Municipal Library of Ermesinde Vila Beatriz.

This meeting served for the presentation of the results of the questionnaire on the collaborative platform, carried out by all partner countries (Portugal, Spain, Turkey, Romania and Poland), as well as for the final presentation of that same platform, which allows and the exchange of opinions, ideas, good practices between facilitators and interlocutors of the CIA, and also allows and also to establish collaborative links between young workers, employment agents, employment NGOs, public authorities and institutions.

The workshop held at this meeting was a visit to the Ermesinde's Senior University. University Senior is a valence of Ágorarte, the Cultural and Artistic Association based in Ermesinde, which began on March 23, 2010, which only began the activities in the following month of April, directed to the group of individuals over 55 years. This has addressed the need to create useful and effective responses to a population layer that is disconnected too soon from its daily tasks and at risk of loneliness and isolation.

The University has the volunteering of professors, already retired, to carry out all activities, and presents a wide curricular offer with disciplines such as decorative arts, foreign languages, economics, taxation, history, computer science, among others (<https://m.facebook.com/agorarte/about>).

The main goals of this initiative are to combat loneliness and to work for inclusion within community and to recognize and value the competences of learning recipients.

This final meeting also took place, for the presentation of the multiplier events held by the organizations, and on the planning of those still to be carried out, and for the presentation of the stakeholders of each partner. In addition, the final budget of the project and the documentation of the final report to be carried out were discussed, and the dissemination of the CIA Project was also discussed.

And thus, the meetings about the CIA Project are concluded and a cycle of design and development of the projetos of the seamen and the dissemination of the same to entities outside the partnership with the various countries begins. However, we will continue to collaborate between countries, and extend to institutions that have not participated in the project itself, but will implement their CIAs.
